Kazakhstan, also spelled Kazakstan, officially Republic of Kazakhstan, Kazakh Қазақстан Республикасы, country of Central Asia. It is bounded on the northwest and north by Russia, on the east by China, and on the south by Kyrgyzstan, Uzbekistan, the Aral Sea, and Turkmenistan; the Caspian Sea bounds Kazakhstan to the southwest. Kazakhstan is the largest country in Central Asia and the ninth-largest in the world. Between its most distant points, Kazakhstan measures about 1,820 miles (2,930 kilometers) east to west and 960 miles north to south. While Kazakhstan was not considered by authorities in the former Soviet Union to be a part of Central Asia, it does have physical and cultural geographic characteristics similar to those of the other Central Asian countries. The capital is Nursultan (formerly Astana, Aqmola, and Tselinograd), in the north-central part of the country. Kazakhstan, formerly a constituent (union) republic of the U.S.S.R., declared independence on December 16, 1991.

Republican Guard

See also: Republican Guard (Kazakhstan)
The Republican Guard was a former independent service branch of the Armed Forces of the Republic of Kazakhstan. It was one of the most combat-ready units of the Armed Forces. It was established by Nazarbayev on 16 March 1992 based on a brigade of the Kazakh Internal Troops deployed in the village of Ak Zhar (located in the Kaskelen District of the Almaty Region). Thus, the Day of the Republican Guard has been set as March 16. On 16 December 1992, conscripts were the first to be sworn into the guard in a ceremony at the Park of 28 Panfilov Guardsmen. Two weeks later, it accepted the role of round-the-clock personal security at the Almaty Presidential Residence, which was then under construction.

Almaty, Russian Alma-Ata, formerly (1855-1921) Verny, city, southeastern Kazakhstan. It was formerly the capital of the Kazakh Soviet Socialist Republic (1929-91) and independent Kazakhstan (1991-97). Almaty lies in the northern foothills of the Trans-Ili Alatau at an elevation of 2,300-3,000 feet (700-900 meters), where the Bolshaya and Malaya Almaatinka rivers emerge onto the plain.

Almaty-The Business Center of Kazakhstan

Today's Almaty is Kazakhstan's largest metropolis, scientific and educational, cultural and historical, economic and financial, banking and industrial center of the country.

Almaty is located in the south-east of Kazakhstan, at the foot of the northern of Tien Shan ridge - Zaili Alatau. The urban territory of Almaty, the home-town of the famous variety of apples "Almaty aport" has more than eight thousand hectares occupied by gardens and parks, squares, and boulevards. Ile-Alatau National Park, whose territory includes a nature reserve and wildlife sanctuary, begins right in the Almaty vicinity.

In 1997, by decree of Nursultan Nazarbayev, the President of the Republic of Kazakhstan, the country's capital was moved from Almaty to Astana. The Law on the special status of Almaty was passed the following year, on July 1, 1998. The city is a major transportation hub in Kazakhstan; it has food processing, light and heavy industry enterprises operating on its territory. The special status is also granted to Almaty because the headquarters of the largest Kazakh banks and subsidiaries of multinational financial institutions and companies are located in it. At the beginning of the third millennium Almaty is implementing large-scale projects, one of which was the commissioning of the subway in 2011. And already in 2012, the Almaty subway was honored with prestigious awards of the European Society for Quality Research (ESQR) for quality.

Modern Almaty is a world-renowned sports center. Almaty won international recognition thanks to such prestigious events as "Asian Games 2011", World Boxing Championships, stages of World Cup in judo and ski jumping, a stage of world "Grand Prix-2013" in volleyball and professional cycling race "Tour of Almaty"

Almaty hosted the World Winter Universiade of 2017. By the opening of the Universiade, the city had had a sports village, new ice palace, and many other modern facilities built in its territory.

ABOUT UNIVERSITY

Western Caspian University (Azerbaijani: Qərbi Kəspı Universiteti) is a private university in Baku, Azerbaijan. Founded in 1991 by Husein Baghirov, it has six schools, 25 majors, 180 faculty and approximately 1500 students. The university took its name because it is modeled after Western universities in style of instruction and values, the latter in response to some of the corrupt practices under the Soviet system.[1] Much of the instruction is conducted in English.

In the late 1990s, the school partnered with American universities, such as Indiana University, to help set up its programs in business and law.[2][3] Many of its partnerships were formed through the now defunct United States Information Agency. Currently, the school has ties with Indiana University, University of Kansas, Mississippi Valley State University, University of North Alabama and Delta State University.[4]
